Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102/103

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(b) the invention was patented or described in a printed publication in this or a foreign country or in public use or on sale in this country, more than one year prior to the date of application for patent in the United States.

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1 and 6 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by, or in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Umeda et al., U.S. Patent # 5,010,137. Umeda teaches a composition comprising all of the materials outlined in the abstract including a vinyl group-functional polysiloxane, an organohydrogensiloxane, transition metal hydrosilylation catalyst, and an organic rubber of which those contemplated in columns 3 and 4 are exemplary. Relevant to the present discussion, it is further disclosed that, in addition to a crosslinking agent for the organic rubber component, there can be added one of a crosslinking accelerator, aid, or retarder. Among the crosslinking aids mentioned in column 8, lines 18-31 include ethylene glycol dimethacrylate and polyethylene glycol dimethacrylate. Specific amounts of this component are not disclosed in the broader disclosure. However, in the examples, the amount of a crosslinking aid employed varies between 1 part per forty parts vinyl-functional polysiloxane (entry 19 in Table 7) and 5 parts per 20 parts (entry 6 in Table 1) hence the range recited in claim 1 is regarded as being at least obvious over the teachings of this reference, if not anticipated.

Reinforcing silica in amounts consistent with those advocated by the claims are prescribed at the bottom of column 7 and in the Examples.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 3-5 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

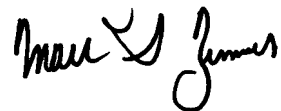

Ahn et al., U.S. Patent Application Publication No. 2005/0038183 is cited as being of interest for its description of a composition that would seem to at least render obvious claim 1 but this document does not qualify as prior art. Alberts et al., U.S. Patent # 4,464,506 teaches a composition comprising a vinyl-functional polysiloxane, an organohydrogensiloxane, and a polymerizable vinyl monomer of which ones adhering to the formula associated with Applicant's component (C) are exemplary. There is also mention of a platinum catalyst but this material is not added until the polymerizable monomer has been copolymerized with the vinyl-functional polysiloxane and, therefore, the compounds corresponding to claimed components (C) and (D) never actually co-exist in this reference.
